	The Downturn	Withd	rawal	Decline	Outreach
Happy
Neutral
Unhappy
Experience	 Working 25 hours a week at Popeyes. Feeling exhausted trying to maintain school, work, and a relationship. Not complaining because everyone she knows is struggling. She breaks up with her boyfriend but none of her friends want to talk about it. She does well on her SATs, but it makes her feel isolated. She doesn't tell her friends because she doesn't want to seem like a show off. She also doesn't want her mom worried about tuition fees. 	 Vivienne visits the school guidance counselor to discuss her feelings about college and her emotions. The counselor asks her if she's preganant when she describes how she's been feeling. The counselor discredits her feeling because she looks beautiful and pulled together. 	 She starts smoking weed with her cousin Ace to numb her feelings. Continues to isolate and not engage her family or friends. 	 She's started dating Trey again. He doesn't want to discuss her gong to college in another state. She told her BFF about the SAT results. Sh was excited but seemed distant. She finally tells her mom why she was receiving so much mail. She was so excited for Vivienne. 	 Her mom begins asking the stress inducing question about how Vivienne is going to pay for college. She doesn't want to deal with Ms. Blake again, and none of her friends are opening up about financing college.
Opportunities	 A clear visual of how stressful her perdicament truly is. Something to validate her feelings. A safe place she feels comfortable expressing her sadness and joy. 	 Culturally competent support. A place where her emotions are not discredited. 	 Reminders to stay connected to a support network. Information for local therapy/counselor. 	 Network of teens experiencing the same journey outside of her communiity. Realistic Al Chatbot 	 Stories that resonate and are inspiring for academic/career goals. Easy to use college funding resources.